

England Excursion, Day 3, 08.03.20

On the third day of our trip to England, Sunday, most people did something with their host families. Our host family, however, was unable to do something with Sofia and I, so we did something with the teachers and the other students who weren't busy. At 11 AM, we walked together from Ratton School to Eastbourne Beach. It took a little more than an hour to get there, and just as we were all getting a bit annoyed from walking- we arrived there. Eastbourne Beach doesn't have sand though, it has pebbles instead. For a while, we just chased the waves and took lots of pictures. In the early afternoon, we decided to have lunch, but halfway through lunchtime, it started pouring. The rain was really heavy, so everyone hurried into a beach café. There were already lots of people in it though, so it got a little cramped. As soon as it had stopped, we went to the Eastbourne Pier Arcade. Everyone started playing on these arcade machines where there are lots of coins, and you can throw more coins to hopefully win some. We didn't win a lot, but it was still fun. Afterwards, our teachers decided to have a scavenger hunt. It was a lot of fun, even though our team didn't win (the winners got ice cream). We left the beach afterwards, and went to the shopping centre for an hour. By the end of the day, everyone was tired, and we decided to head home after a quite eventful, and most of all, fun day.
